The Northern Lights are predicted to dim over the next decade, however Tromso in Norway is a popular town to visit for a chance to witness them. The Northern Lights have fascinated people for thousands of years, and continue to do so, and drawings of the lights have been found in caves and dated at over 30,000 years old.

Try your hand at drawing the Northern Lights in chalk following this video tutorial.

Reflection:

If you would like to see the Northern Lights in action, it is possible you may see them here at this live feed set up in Canada – but remember there is a time difference as the camera is six hours behind British time, so the best time to view is first thing in the morning!

Safety Notes:

Online Access: Supervise young people when they're online and give them advice about staying safe.
